III. TEACHING AND LEA	RNING PROCEDURE	NOTES TO TEACHERS
A. Activating Prior Knowledge	 (Day 1) 1. Short Review Activity 1. Gratitude Journaling. (7 minutes) Materials Needed: Pen or pencil, Notebook or journal Instructions: Take a few deep breaths to relax your mind and body. Write down the date at the top of the page. Reflect on your day or week and think about the positive aspects, no matter how small they might seem. Write down at least one thing you're grateful for. This can be a simple thing like a smile from a friend, a sunny day, or a compliment you received. Briefly explain why you're grateful for it. This helps you dig deeper into the positive emotions associated with each one. Take a moment to re-read your entries and let the feelings of gratitude sink in. Close your journal, put away your writing tool, and take another deep breath. Carry the positive feelings with you as you continue your day. 	Practicing gratitude journaling helps shift students focus from negative thoughts to positive ones. It trains their mind to seek out and appreciate the good things in your life, no matter how small. Over time, this activity can improve their overall outlook, boost your mood, and contribute to better mental well-being. Remember, this is just one of many activities that can help safeguard their mental health. It's important to combine various strategies, including regular exercise, socializing, getting enough
